Shared Libraries

Return to Glossary

Shared libraries are `.so` (or in Windows `.dll`, or in OS X `.dylib`) files.

These are linked dynamically simply including the address of the library (whereas static linking is a waste of space). Dynamic linking links the libraries at the run-time. Thus, all the functions are in a special place in memory space, and every program can access them, without having multiple copies of them. See: Static Library

Source: https://www.geeksforgeeks.org/difference-between-static-and-shared-libraries/

From:
https://www.omgwiki.org/dido/ - DIDO Wiki

Permanent link:
https://www.omgwiki.org/dido/doku.php?id=dido:public:ra:xapend:xapend.a_glossary:s:shared_libraries&rev=1619128505

Last update: 2021/04/22 17:55